Understanding the Origins of TTouch Method

The TTouch method changed how we care for pets and dog wellness. It's a new way of massaging animals and looking at their health. Linda Tellington-Jones started this, changing how we see our pets.

The TTouch method started in 1975. Linda knew a lot about animals and how to help them. She was inspired by the Feldenkrais method, which focuses on body awareness and puppy wellness.

A Visionary's Approach to Animal Care

Linda Tellington-Jones saw animals in a new light. She wanted to help them in many ways. Her method helps with:

- Physical rehabilitation
- Emotional healing
- Behavioural transformation
- Stress reduction

She believed that touch can really help animals. By linking body and mind, she made a system that supports animals' health and happiness.

Innovative Techniques and Philosophical Foundations

The TTouch method uses special touches to talk to animals. It's different from old ways of training. It focuses on:

1. Mindful communication
2. Gentle, purposeful touch
3. Emotional and physical healing

Linda showed that TTouch can help animals with many problems.

It's a big step forward in caring for animals.

The Science Behind Tellington Touch

Tellington Touch is a new way to talk to animals through touch. It changes their behaviour by touching their nervous system. This is different from old training methods.

This method is based on science and helps animals in a special way. It uses touch to wake up their nervous system and make their cells work better. The touch is soft and circular, helping animals feel and learn better.

- Circular movements range from pressure levels 1-10
- Clockwise circles strengthen the body
- Counterclockwise circles release tension
- Pressure levels vary based on animal size and condition

Studies show that TTouch changes important chemicals in animals' brains. It helps them feel less stressed and more focused. This can really help animals with problems like being too anxious or barking too much.

TTouch aims to transform an animal's learning potential through gentle, intentional touch.

Science says TTouch can make animals relax and feel closer to each other. It's a way to really understand and help animals feel better.
